RE: Freedom of Information Act Request NGC19-079

Dear Ms. Adams:

This is in response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request dated November 7, 2018 and received in our office on November 8, 2018 via foia@nara.gov . We assigned your request the above internal tracking number in addition to a FOIAonline tracking number NARA-NGC-2019-000098. In your request, you asked for:

Records of National Security Administration, Department of Defense DARPA office, academic institutions doing work with DARPA or DOD, and government records of the State of Illinois that are retrievable by your name for the years 2015-2018. You listed the following topics for these records: RFID chips, nanotechnology implantation, EMF RF Microwave Scalar-Directed Energy Weapons, and communication systems, integrated circuit systems, military computer software equipment, and warfare technology.

The National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) is the repository for documents and materials created in the course of business conducted by agencies of the Executive branch of the United States Federal government. We estimate that less than 5% of these records are retained permanently for legal or historical purposes. Federal agencies usually transfer their permanent records to NARA no earlier than 15 years from the date of creation, but we receive many well after 30 years from the date of creation. The time period for which you are looking for records is too recent for any such federal agency records to be in our legal custody.

The National Archives is not a repository for state or municipal records. For government records of the State of Illinois, you need to contact the appropriate state agency that you believe holds such records.

You need to submit your request for federal agency records directly to the federal agency concerned. Each agency publishes on its webpage a list of the systems of records it maintains that are retrievable by a person's name, address, social security number, date of birth or other types of personally identifiable information. You should consult each agency's website on how to submit a Privacy Act request for such records, and what documentation they require as part of your request.

This completes the processing of your FOIA request to us.

If you are not satisfied with our action on this request, you have the right to file an administrative appeal within ninety (90) calendar days from the date of this letter via regular U.S. mail or email. By filing an appeal, you preserve your rights under FOIA and give the agency a chance to review and reconsider your request and the agency's decision. If you submit your appeal in writing, please address it to the Deputy Archivist of the United States (ND), National Archives and Records Administration, 8601 Adelphi Road, College Park, Maryland 20740. Both the letter and the envelope should be clearly marked "Freedom of Information Act Appeal." If you submit your appeal by e-mail please send it to FOIA@nara.gov, also addressed to the Deputy Archivist of the United States. Please be sure to explain why you believe this response does not meet the requirements of the FOIA. All correspondence should reference your case tracking number NGC19-079 and your FOIAonline tracking number.

If you would like to discuss our response before filing an appeal to attempt to resolve your dispute without going through the appeals process, you may contact our FOIA Public Liaison Gary M. Stern for assistance at:
